About the Music

Afrobeat in Fanfare is intended to pay homage to the great Nigerian musical icon, Fela Anikulapo Kuti. Across the globe his legacy forged Afrobeat music to international prominence. This genre of music which continues to be explored by great current popular music stars from Nigeria and Africa is a unique fusion of indigenous and western instruments, sounds, textures and percussive rhythms that retain elements of African highlife and fusion. As a trained classical musician, Fela found a way of merging the Jazz idioms such as the harmonic structures with distinct brassy horn sections which punctuate and also serve as recurring melodic units. Fela's ability to orchestrate through instrumental textures, sounds and styles that relay stories of the past, the present and the future, placed him on a pedestal all by himself. In his music, it is not just merely about the brassy sounds with the punchy harmonic or melodic idea but rather the way the instruments unique character within a song supports his intention to describe an extra-musical narrative. Perhaps it could be the idea of musically expressing resistance against prevailing economic norms in the Nigerian culture. Fela found a way to foretell and preach through his art form and in such a way that we had no option but to listen rapturously.

Growing up in Lagos, Nigeria, my mom owned a local grocery store which was situated directly adjacent to a record store. Most record stores in Lagos, often had large speakers in front of the store to play much of the music they had in stock so as to attract the attention of customers. Cycling through various records on those very loud speakers while I often assisted my Mom at her store, was my involuntary introduction to the music of many great African artists and including Fela. Afrobeat in Fanfare explores a particular tune by Fela titled: Lady Shakara. The text says: If you call am Woman, African woman no go 'gree; She go say, she go say, "I be lady, oh." Afrobeat in Fanfare explores motives or themes from this tune through various classical techniques of motivic development. The piece begins with fragmented thematic units and by the end of the work we are introduced to the full span of this tune. Typical to Afrobeat is the use of jazz and harmony and at certain sections in this work, I have employed ascending modal harmonies.

Afrobeat in Fanfare is aimed at merging the genre of Afrobeat with the 19th century French and Italian fanfare. Afrobeat in Fanfare is a short motivic flourish that explores the typical stylings of Afrobeat while paying homage to the icon who pioneered this genre of music, bringing it into international prominence. And if the music moves you to dance, enjoy the freedom because it's true to the form.

Afrobeat in Fanfare

This musical score page features a title "Afrobeat in Fanfare" centered above the staves. The score is organized into four systems separated by vertical bar lines. The instrumentation includes woodwind (Flutes 1 and 2, Oboes 1 and 2, Bassoons 1 and 2, Clarinets in B-flat), brass (Horns 1 and 2, Trombones 1 and 2), percussion (Timpani, Percussion, Contra Bass Drum, C. Drums), and strings (Cellos, Double Bass). The first system begins with a dynamic of f. The second system starts with dynamics of mp followed by f. The third system starts with f. The fourth system concludes with f. Measure numbers 26, 76, and 77 are indicated at the top of each system respectively. Various performance instructions like slurs, grace notes, and dynamic markings such as f, mp, and p are present throughout the score. A box labeled "Snare Drum" is placed over the Percussion part in the third system. Measures 76 and 77 show complex rhythmic patterns, particularly in the woodwind and brass sections, reflecting the "Afrobeat in Fanfare" style.
